Miniature Dachshunds are house dogs and should not be left outside for long periods of time. How will you provide daily in home care for your puppy?

Do you have an area in your home where your puppy can be safely left unsupervised?

Do you have a fenced in yard? If not, how will you maintain the safety of your puppy when out doors?

Will you be able to provide play and exercise time for your puppy on a daily basis?

Your puppy will need to be house trained. Will you be able to patiently provide this training to your puppy?

Do you plan to attend puppy classes?

Do you plan to show your puppy at AKC events? Do you want to breed your puppy?

We have a spay/neuter contract for non-show puppies. Are you willing to uphold this non-breeding agreement?

Quality care for a dog is expensive. Have you considered how you will financially prepare for these expenses?

Caring for a puppy is rewarding but also time consuming. Do you feel you have time in your schedule to provide loving care to a puppy?

A puppy should always be considered a member of the family. The element of love shared between a person and their dog is paramount to the happiness of both. Have you carefully considered the emotional commitment you are making to your puppy?

Your precious puppy is going to grow up and become an adult dog. Fortunately, the dachshund breed is generally hardy and healthy with the benefits of a long life span. You can look forward to sharing 12 -15 years of companionship with your puppy. Are you prepared to support and nurture a dog through its lifetime?

Belle Amore Dachshunds looks forward to helping you bring a precious puppy into your life. After we have approved your application you will become an active pet parent waiting for the arrival of your "bundle of paws."
